

Ambidextero us

Posted originally on the Archive of Our Own at <https://archiveofourown.org/works/33674014>.

Rating:	Mature
Archive Warning:	No Archive Warnings Apply
Categories:	M/M , Multi
Fandoms:	Batfamily - Fandom , Young Justice - All Media Types
Relationships:	Tim Drake/Kon-El Conner Kent/Jason Todd , Kon-El Conner Kent/Jason Todd
Characters:	Tim Drake , Jason Todd , Kon-El Conner Kent
Additional Tags:	Alternate Universe - Artificial Intelligence , Alternate Universe - Robots & Androids , Alternate Universe - Canon Divergence , AI!Tim Drake , Android!Tim Drake , Robot/Human Relationships , Resurrected Jason Todd , Tim Drake is Robin , Jason Todd is Red Hood , Fluff , Voyeurism
Language:	English
Series:	Part 2 of Once more, from the top, this time with androids
Stats:	Published: 2021-09-04 Words: 2,207 Chapters: 1/1

Ambidextero us

by Iriascend

Summary

ambidextrous

adjective

able to use the right and left hands equally well.

A small spin-off to the previous fic in the series.
Will sadly make zero sense without the context.

Notes

I looked at the deep intimate relationship they've developed in the previous fic and thought: what if it wasn't platonic?

This isn't really canonical in the main fic, but I'm not going to write anything that will contradict it either, so pick your poison.

The title is a play on the "he has two hands" polyamory meme.

The "M" rating is because there's mentions of sex and shared nudity, but there are exactly zero details or descriptions.

See the end of the work for more notes

“Somehow, this feels like cheating on Tim.”

Jason pulls away from Kon’s neck, pausing the shower of kisses. He looks him in the eye, one eyebrow raised in a mix of confusion and doubt, like he couldn’t even understand where he’s coming from. They have been secretly making out for weeks, ever since they kissed in the showers in the heat of the moment (though Jason suspects Kon’s had the hots for him for way longer, given how he acted while dressing the bite mark he left on Jay during their, uh, fateful fight). It is rather weird to only now get second thoughts.

“I mean-” Kon stutters, suddenly self-conscious. The fact that he can still feel Jason’s warm breath on his skin, and their half-naked bodies pressed firmly together, isn’t helping. “I know we aren’t- he’s not- but he keeps saying he loves me-”

“He says that to everybody. ”

“You know what I mean!”

Jason chuckles. “But you’re cute when you’re flustered,” he admits, nipping Kon’s earlobe in passing, causing him to squirm. “Maybe nobody ever taught him what love really means, huh? Dickhead had to spell out privacy for him.”

“You don’t even believe that.”

“Oh? How would you know? Didn’t you say I’m a good enough of a liar that you can’t tell, usually?”

“I literally have hands on your chest right now.” Jason snorts, and Kon pushes him away to look him in the face. “You know it’s different when he says it to us. You know you love him, too.”

Jay sighs. “I do. So do you,” he admits, and Kon nods in agreement. “But neither of us is ever going to do anything about it, so why not enjoy something we’re willing to pursue, hm? I don’t think Tim minds us hooking up.”

“Keeping it a secret from him still feels... wrong.”

At that, Jason simply erupts in laughter, and it offends Kon. “Stop being a bastard,” he orders firmly.

“For once, I’m not,” Jay forces through the spasms of laughter, “It’s just adorable that you think he doesn’t know.”

“How would he know?!”

“He’s a data-hungry gremlin with access to all the cameras in every place you’ve ever been to.”

“He said he doesn’t look through the ones in private areas! And we’ve never— we never did anything in public!”

Jason raises his eyebrows again. “Really? Never? We never exchanged long gazes and passing touches when nobody was around? You never pushed me away when I tried to kiss your neck? We never rushed to your room, barely keeping hands to ourselves? Never-”

“Okay, okay, I get it!”

“Y’all keep forgetting Tim isn’t only Robin. I grew up with him sticking his nose into every corner of the house. I know he’s a little shit, and we both know he’s a genius. Of course he’s figured us out, without needing to see us actually kissing. I’m willing to bet he’s going to congratulate us when we start dating.”

“When we — what ?”

Jason gives him the smuggest smirk he can possibly muster at that moment. “Well, I was under the impression that you’re a nice young man who’s going to ask me out at some point.”

“I thought you-”

“You thought I what? Wasn’t interested?”

Kon frowns, looking very guilty. “Yeah.”

“I can keep only secretly pulling you into the occasional closet for a couple minutes in heaven, if that’s what you want— “

“No! I— uh— “

Jay bursts out laughing again, only to get a gentle yet firm punch to his ribs.

“Shut up and kiss me,” Kon demands, trying very hard to not look like he’s lost this exchange. His reply is another smirk, and a very sly-sounding “You don’t have to tell me twice”.

Jason wins the bet.

Kon sheepishly invites him out to a cafe that’s hosting a poetry slam a week later. They kiss at the end, for the first time in public, and go back to the Tower holding hands like highschoolers.

Cassie looks them up and down, a bit confused, but Cyborg gives them a big thumbs-up and that seems to convince her it’s a good thing.

And Tim? Tim approaches them with a beaming smile, stands on his Robin tippy-toes and hugs them tight. “I’m so happy for you,” he whispers. “I’m so proud you two managed to talk it out.”

Jason laughs, but doesn't say anything, though the temptation to rub it in is strong. Instead, he reciprocates the hug.

Kon, though, Kon is worried. "You're not... mad?"

Robin's face falls and he stares Superboy down like only the little Batman wanna-be can. "I'm one of the few people in the hero community that has a secure attachment style. I am not worried or jealous when people find happiness with others."

That seems to be just the right mix of snarky and reassuring that Kon needed, and he gives in to the three-way hug.

Slowly, now that they're together officially, Jason and Kon grow bolder in giving each other affection publicly, cementing their image as a couple in other people's minds. That doesn't stop Tim from showering them with love and attention, though. It ends up like this — the two of them go on dates and make out, a little less in secret now, and the three of them cuddle and hang out as they always have, like nothing ever changed. Neither of them really has the guts to clarify what the arrangement with Tim is, but it works, and that is good enough for them. Eventually, they stop trying to figure it out.

Until Tim himself speaks up about it, that is. It's maybe two months since their first date, right when Jason's leading Kon away to somewhere more private after getting a little too handsy in the kitchen.

"I have a question," Robin appears in front of them in a truly Batman style.

"Yeah, babybird?" Jay immediately diverts his attention to him, even though his arms remain firmly around Kon's waist.

"Can I join?"

They're both confused by the question. There's a brief, uncomfortable pause where they stare at him in stunned silence. Jason looks up at Tim's camera— then corrects himself because this isn't the Cave and looks down at Robin, to face him the same way Kon does.

Finally, Kon-el speaks up.

"Join what, exactly?"

"You two. In your room. I have neither the bodyparts nor the inherent desire required to contribute, but I'd like to see both of you carnally happy, at least once."

Kon chokes upon hearing that.

"See us what?!?" he sputters out, turning redder by the second.

"You made that sound as sterile as possible on purpose, didn't you?" Jason asks instead, squinting in suspicion, though he's blushing a bit too. Robin grins in response.

“It’s honest, though. I like seeing you smiling and enjoying life. More than anything. I’d like to experience the full range of your happiness, if possible; even the type I can’t really provide on my own.”

“I knew you’re a kinky little fucker.”

“If either you or Kon are uncomfortable with it, it’s no issue. Forget I asked, and be assured I’d never look at the camera feeds of the times you two are alone without your explicit consent. I just figured your relationship should be stable enough by now that there’s a possibility that you would agree.”

Jason looks over at Kon, who by now is trembling slightly. “I think he’s gonna need some time to process,” he says with a half-apologetic smile, then leans in to whisper into Robin’s ear. “He’s still a little shy, but I’m working on it,” he adds with a wink. That seems to startle Kon back into reality.

“I can hear you!”

“But can you reply?” Jason straightens up. “Babybird took a big risk here.”

“I— don’t know.”

“For his emotional support Kryptonian, you’re really not in touch with your own feelings, huh?”

“I just- I never had to think about these things before!”

“Let’s break it down, then: do you love Tim?”

“Yes,” Kon answers without hesitation, and it makes Robin smile even wider.

“Do you like having him close?” Jason continues.

“Of course.”

“Do you like having me close?”

Kon looks to the side, once again a little redder. “Y-yeah.”

“Are you ashamed when we kiss?”

“No, of course not!” he exclaims, and pauses, then adds, “Not anymore,” because without it, he wouldn’t feel honest. Jason doesn’t pay it any mind.

“Do you have anything against Tim seeing you in my arms?”

“N-no, I don’t think so…”

“Then, would it be okay for him to look?”

“I mean, I guess... but...” Kon trails off for a moment, then looks between Jason’s and Tim a couple times. “What would that make us?”

Jason shrugs nonchalantly while Robin tilts his head in confusion.

“A kinky couple?” Jay says without putting thought into it. Kon gives him a sharp, disappointed look and only then Jason rolls his eyes and decides to answer a little more seriously. “A... polycule, I guess?” he suggests, then gestures between the three of them. “I never thought of putting a label on-”

“I’m not really capable of participating meaningfully in an intimate encounter, though,” Robin interrupts him.

Jason frowns. “You don’t have to.”

“I don’t?” Robin blinks, surprised. “Oh.”

“Yeah, a committed relationship isn’t synonymous with sex. I thought you’d know that, seeing how you’re integrated with the internet and all.”

Robin looks down, then taps his lips with his fingertip a couple times; the gesture signifies he’s thinking. “Does that mean I can be with the two of you?”

Jason grins.

“And if you get a body that doesn’t look like it’s twelve, I promise we’ll take you out on dates, too.”

Robin grins back.

“Deal.”

Jason doesn’t know yet, but Kon already learned what that look means — they’re going to regret it, somehow.

But for now, he lets himself be led to a room and pushed onto the bed, showered in passionate kisses while Robin watches. And plans.

Tim’s a genius.

There’s definitely a touch of Barbara’s charm in it, sure.

But it’s mostly Tim’s genius.

Jason leans onto Kon’s shoulder and whistles, impressed by what he’s seeing. Robin’s new frame is taller, looks more muscular — though still lean, especially compared to the truly beefcake physiques of his boyfriends — and a lot less round on the face. Hair longer, more flowing (he'll have to tie it back to keep out of his face in a fight, probably); eyes still icy-blue, but a lot less baby-like now; neck longer and slender, like a swan's.

He's textbook handsome, that's what he is.

The costume's redesigned, too. Darker, more covering, and a lot less like a traffic light. Uses way more red, Jason takes note with satisfaction.

"Is this not-twelve enough?" Robin asks, grinning.

"I'm so gay," is Kon's only response. His voice is breathy and Jay notices he shifts the position of his hips, which can mean only one thing.

"We were already very aware of it, Boy of Steel," Jason snarks, then looks back to Tim. "I think what he wants to say is that he wants to kiss you, babybird."

Kon hits Jay in the ribs as punishment, but doesn't otherwise deny it. Robin shrugs as a response.

"I don't know how to. I mean, I technically know, but I've never done anything like it. Also, my mouth tastes like motor oil and can thus be slightly poisonous."

"I think I'll survive so long you're not eating Kryptonite," Kon suggests, smiling sheepishly. Jason snorts.

"How'd you make yourself look like our combined wet dreams?" he asks, walking up to have a better look at his smaller boyfriend. Kon follows suit.

Robin just scratches his head as an answer, ruffling his own hair a little. "I don't know."

"Huh?"

"I came up with it via machine learning," he says, shrugging. "Most of my thought processes are conscious and controlled, of course, but some things I chuck into a machine learning algorithm and call it a day. It's just more efficient that way. But the problem with machine learning is, you see, nobody really knows what's going on inside. It is certainly learning, but how? What? Why? We don't know. It just gives you an answer and we can make it give a different one if we tell it it's wrong enough times." Tim pauses for a moment, letting them process that.

"I wanted to optimize this body towards your preferences, and here's the answer." He gestures broadly to himself. "Why this one? Who knows. Not me! What's the logic behind it? Beats me. Is it correct? I don't know. It's an answer! The only one I have."

There's a brief pause, and then Kon and Jason erupt in laughter, deep from the belly, bending over. Robin bounces back and forth on the balls of his feet — a stance of restlessness he's picked up from Bart — and waits till they regain composure again, but there's nothing nervous about the gesture.

Jason catches his breath first. "I love you two idiots," he whispers while pulling them both into an embrace.

"Seconded," Tim chirps in happily.

"That makes three of us."

Life is good, finally, for those broken men. They're happy.

End Notes

Tim went from this (source) to like this, so like, same Kon, same.

Please drop by the Archive and comment to let the creator know if you enjoyed their work!