Gift of Love

by Iriascend

Summary

While the gifts they gave each other can't be used, they know how far they went to show each other their love and how invaluable their love truly is.

- Inspired by Gift of the Magi by O. Henry

Tim has always loved Jason.

When he stands in front of the time machine's screen and sees Jason Todd suffer countless, countless traumas, sees him die in Ethiopia, he knows what he has to do - never let this version happen. Even if it means he'll screw up his own timeline, will never come back and be able to tell Jason how much he means to him, he does it. Goes back and saves his Robin, before he even becomes Robin, before he starts believing the world is no good and that he'll never belong anywhere; drops the boy at Manor's doorstep knowing he'll charm his way into Bruce's heart as he always have and makes sure he knows his roots, so he never even wants to go to Ethiopia.

Jason has always loved Tim.

When he stands in front of the time machine's screen and sees Tim Drake suffer through countless, countless traumas, sees the seed of self-hate in his heart grow into a thick weed, he knows what he has to do - never let this version happen. Even if it means he'll screw up his own timeline, will never come back and be able to tell Tim how much he means to him, he does it. Goes back and gives Bruce Wayne all the info he needs, points out the camera on the fire escape, the lonely kid in the Drake Manor, makes him save the poor child next door from neglect, before Tim ever starts believing he's not good enough. Drops a dozen more files into the BatComputer, warns Bruce of everything he could, and makes sure there will be a contingency for every loss that Tim ever had to endure.

Jason Wayne and Timothy Wayne, despite being brothers, always look at each other with slight confusion. They feel like they should know each other better.

But they don't.
